>Howard had to wait in the waiting room while Bernie was at the end of her delivery. He didn't want to. He wanted to be there with her but the doctor had kicked him out. He paced the floor until the doctor came in.

"Congratulations," the doctor told him, "You have a baby daughter."

Howard gasped.

_A girl, _he thought to himself, _We made a person._

Howard followed the doctor into the room. Bernie was already in recovery. In her arms was a beautiful baby wrapped up in a pink blanket. He nearly cried.

"What are you crying for," Bernie teased, "I was the one that went through 7 hours of labor and pushed this little one out of me."

She paused.

"It was totally worth it," she added giving the baby a kiss on the forehead, "Howie do you want to hold her?"

"I do," he said.

As Bernie handed him their baby Howard nearly cried again.

"What are we going to name her," he asked.

"Actually I already picked a name," Bernie said, "There was only one name that seemed right for her."

"You picked a name without me," Howard asked.

"I did," Bernie said, "But I know you're going to love it."

"What is it," Howard asked.

"Her name is Debbie Carol Anne"

"That's perfect," Howard said.

"She's perfect," Bernie said

"She is," Howard said, "and so are you"
